

Master of Archival Studies

In our information-critical world, the ability to manage records from creation to destruction means organizations can make better business decisions and improve efficiency, while ensuring both security and privacy of data. SLAIS MAS graduates work as archivists, records managers, digital asset managers, privacy and access specialists and more.

Program Highlights:

- Courses in records management, digital archives, electronic records, preservation, database design and more, with optional thesis
- 48 credits - finish in less than two years
- Include experiential learning opportunities in your program of study via paid co-op work terms, internship placements & more
- State-of-the-art learning and research facilities in a world-class university located in beautiful Vancouver Canada
